OUR FASHION LETTER.

All the Latest Fashions for Fall and Winter—The Directoire Model the Very Latest Thing—Dress Hats of Ottoman Silk—Feathers the Favored Trimming—Beautiful Broadcloths and Cheviots—The Directoire Skirt.

Editor CALEDONIAN:—

All the glories of fall and winter millinery are now displayed in the shop windows, and milliners of all grades are busy preparing for their openings. Some of the prettiest of the imported French hats have low broad crowns that set well down over the head, thus doing away with the necessity for bandeaux. Another important point to be noted is the great size of many of the hats, even those shapes that are now called small being much larger than those of previous seasons.

The very newest shape, the Directoire style is a hat with a rather high crown and a brim that slants forward in the old "Poke Bonnet" fashion, but is abruptly turned back at some point, the turn however being a matter of bending the brim near the edge rather than slanting it from the crown. A very smart model from a noted French house is made of black satin. The brim is short in front and perfectly straight but is turned up in the back. The high crown is of black panne velvet put on in a full pulled effect. The brim is faced underneath with pale yellow satin. The trimming consists of rather short, full ostrich tips in willow effect standing upright at the right side of the hat. A very novel feature are the satin streamers that fasten at the left side of the chin beneath a big satin rosette, the centre formed by a pink rose.

Although satin covered hats are to be worn again this season, decidedly the latest novelty is the hat of ottoman silk. A very handsome example comes from the Maison Carlier in Paris. It is one of the new shapes, the brim at the left side rolling up in rather a dashing style and is entirely covered with a very fine ottoman cord silk in a beautiful shade of blue. The trimming is simple but extremely chic and consists of ribbon quillings, matching the color of the hat, face. These are placed around the crown, double rows standing upright about the top of it, and three rows turning downwards with soft scarf drapery between.

Feathers are decidedly the most popular trimming this season. Ostrich plumes and tips are naturally used on the dressy hats, and many wings and new band effects are seen. Heron aigrettes are considered very smart. Ribbons are largely used, particularly in big rosette effects in combination with feathers. Immense jet buckles are seen on some of the new hats, a few of these ornaments being at least ten inches long by three high.

Choosing the fall or winter gown is not an easy task this season as the new materials are so charming. For the tailor gown this year, fashion says very decidedly either cheviot or broadcloth and nowhere are these fabrics shown in greater variety than at the old established and reliable house of Lord & Taylor, who have the reputation of being the first to show the latest novelties in both imported and domestic materials. The cheviots they are displaying are certainly smartness personified. Stripes are to be largely worn and there are multitudes of striped cheviots from which to choose. Diagonal stripes are very stylish. Then there are hair line stripes, chevron stripes and a new sort of stripe in herring-bone effect. Some of these striped materials, both in the cheviots and serges, are made with a plaid border, which though it is not new will be worn to a great extent this winter.

Very lovely are the new broadcloths, including all the standard colorings as well as in the pastel shades and in some charming shades of lavender called Wistaria and a most delightful tint of dark red that goes by the name of Catawba. There are also fancy broadcloths in all the latest striped effects and some rather smart examples that are checked. Broadcloth, especially chiton broadcloth, is to be greatly used in making the fashionable Directoire, or to give it its more popular name, sheath skirt. This skirt has but two seams, one up the centre back and the other at the left side of the front where it is slit to above the knee to show a pleating of silk, lace, chiton etc. All these skirts are made with the high Empire waist line that appears on nearly every one of this season's Paris frocks. This is not the old Empire line hanging loose from just below the bust, it is more like what used to be called the corsage skirt, and while it comes up as high as the old Empire models it is carefully fitted at the waist and outlines the figure in a most attractive fashion although it is designed to give the straight lines and the hipless effect that is absolutely the very latest Paris fad.
